The committee increased the receipts from the 50-cent levy $1,500, and appropriated it as follows: Real estate, $1,000 for designating streets and alleys, and city prison fund, $500. The appropriation for the street signs was warmly endorsed by every member, and amusing tales were told of the difficulties strangers experience when trying to tell one street from another.

City Engineer White called the committee's attention to the need of having streets named and houses numbered by a system. At present, he said, a man built a house and numbered it—if he numbered it at all—to suit himself. He said the city should be the authority, and should compel citizens to number their homes. The city engineer also suggested the re-naming of some streets and alleys. All plans of subdividing lots should also be submitted to council so as to see whether streets and alleys are laid out in proper width, and conform to existing streets.

A resolution, embodying these suggestions, is likely to be introduced shortly in council.
